Founded in 1984, the Johnson Law Group is a boutique law firm that provides clients with a wide range of legal services and maintains an international development technical assistance consulting capacity. Our core administrative and technical staff is located in Washington, D.C. These individuals, together with a network of more than 5,000 highly skilled associates around the world, provide legal and strategic counsel as well as technical assistance to individuals, organizations and firms engaged in international development. We focus on issues related to rule of law and democracy and governance reform worldwide. Associates of the firm have provided consulting services for a variety of bilateral and multilateral donors, including USAID, the US Department of State, the United Nations, and others.

For purposes of federal contracting, the firm is a certified small business pursuant to the provisions of the U.S. Small Business Administration; DUNS no. 826323961.

Recent consultancies include:

- Development of a legal framework for international partnerships at the U.S. Department of State
- Rural economic development in Burkina Faso
- Local government reform in Central Asia
- Justice sector reform efforts in Jordan and Haiti
- Anti-corruption and legal reform in Albania and Lesotho
- Administrative law reform in Bosnia and Herzegovina

What one client says: “The quality of the work was excellent and to the Mission's satisfaction. In terms of the report writing, [the team] demonstrated an excellent knowledge of country context, current state of affairs of BiH administrative legal system, as well as very good analytical skills in suggesting useful findings and recommendations for the Mission's purposes. Therefore, the overall rating for the quality of product or service is excellent.”

--CTO, USAID/BIH
